MOTHER NO.29 BOOM CYCLE

Until this summer, the only way to get one of Mother’s special organic sourdough pizzas [made using seawater] was to go to Copenhagen. But the pioneering pizzeria powerhouse is now also open at Circuit West Village, bringing its ingredients direct from Italy and delivering the same experience that was so captivatingly welcomed in Denmark.

As well as pizza there’s Abruzzo-style arrosticini (skewered lamb) and supplì, the Roman answer to arancini made with ragù and mozzarella. Visitors can also enjoy buffet-style branches complemented by a range of drinks, including Mother’s own brew. @Mother_07

No. 29 Power Station West is the village pub with a difference,专著于 day eeting and drinking in a custom-designed space which brings to mind the industrial glamour of the early 20th century. When the Power Station first took shape, the menu was deceptively simple, but created using locally-sourced ingredients: examples include breakfast of avocado, lime, and chilli on sourdough, lunch of coconut poached chicken salad, and for dessert while chocolate, crème brûlée with passionfruit.

To accompany the food – or to be enjoyed on their own – are a range of cocktails, more than 30 wines and 20-plus beers. @No29PowerStWest

Lifestyle brand Boom Cycle, renowned for its high-energy, music-focused fitness experience, will open its flagship studio at Battersea Power Station in September 2017. The new venue will have two indoor cycling studios, each kitted-out with a state-of-the-art Funktion-One sound system and the top of the range models of Schwinn bikes.

Boom Cycle’s signature 45-minute classes will be on offer, plus express 30-minute sessions over the lunch period with all daily rides led by their expert motivators. There will be communal areas where riders will be invited to socialise, work or simply kick back and relax post class. Open 6 September @beecyc introducing... a taste of what’s new on site

THE VILLAGE HALL COFFEE WORKS

The Hetty Village Hall has already played host to the Battersea Power Station Community Choir, Edinburgh fringe comedians, informative talks on subjects from art to architecture, film festivals, dance and yoga classes, kids’ activities and more.

The Village Hall is part of a £7m cultural programme which includes an educational installation at the Visitor Centre and the new Power Station Live art installation, from acclaimed designer Morag Myerscough. The cultural programme is masterminded by Jude Kelly, artistic director of the Southbank Centre. @BatterseaPowerSt

The Coffee Works Project is an independent, family-run specialty coffee house. Showcasing the best quality coffee available, the team source their coffee through small independent producers, offering expressos from producers in El Salvador to Bolivian filter coffee.

To highlight the individual flavour profiles of the coffees, specific brew methods are selected to partner each variety of coffee. And to accompany your perfect cup of coffee will be a selection of cakes, baked fresh on-site, pastries, charcuterie and cheese. Opens in September @thecoffeeworksproject

The Battersea General Store offers a huge range of goods from all around the world, while also celebrating local craft produce and providing household essentials. There are many items on its shelves which cannot be found anywhere else in London: cokes from Nantucket, vodka from Hong Kong, Japanese whiskies and so many more. Online deliveries available. @TGGeneralStore

“We have everything you need – and if you want something we haven’t got, we’ll do everything we can to get it for you” – RAJ BHATIA, GENERAL STORE OWNER

GETTING HERE

See our map at the top of the page. Our next stop is on a river bus on the south side of Chelsea Bridge, through Grosvenor Arch.

We’re open seven days a week. Check our listings to see what’s on. batterseapowerstation.co.uk

To find us search for “Circuit West SWR” on Google maps, or enter via the south side of Chelsea Bridge, through Grosvenor Arch.

As a London resident, you might like to see this special edition of Power Station Post. It marks the restoration of the chimneys, part of London’s famous skyline, for generations to come.

VISIT US

When you come and see us, why not make the most of the new places to eat and drink in Circuit West Village?

POWER STATION POST Special edition – September 2017

THEY’RE BACK

Most Londoners are familiar with the famous four chimneys of Battersea Power Station. They’ve been part of the city’s skyline for almost 90 years, and became world famous following their appearance on Pink Floyd’s inflatable pig on the Animals album cover in 1977. But what you might not know is that the chimneys you see today are brand new, built completely from scratch over the last two years.

The original chimneys, built in the 1930s, one in the 1940s and one in the 1950s, had to be taken down because they had become corroded and unsafe. Decades of damage from the sulphur in the old Power Station’s exhaust gases, followed by many years of neglect after the station closed down in 1983, had taken their toll.

But the Power Station has Grade II listed status, so it wasn’t possible to simply knock down the old chimneys. Exact replica new chimneys have now been completed where the old ones stood, with the entire design supervised by Historic England. The only differences are that the new chimneys have modern steel reinforcement structures, and their concrete has not been mixed using salty Thames water – that was another reason for the old chimneys’ poor condition.

Special construction methods have been used to produce the same appearance as the originals. Some 25,000 wheelbarrows of concrete were poured by hand into shuttered layers which were allowed to set only one at a time, recreating the layered appearance of the old chimneys.

Now that the new chimneys are built, they need to be polished. Using samples taken from the old ones, a master paint of the same weathered colour has been created. First coats are going on now, and the top coats will be put on at one point in time so that the chimneys age together.

The chimneys will now stand for generations to come, but they won’t be mere monuments to the past. Two of them will be used to emit the water vapour from the energy centres powering the redeveloped site. Part of this, Circuit West Village, is already open to the public. Another chimney will soon have a 360-degree viewing platform to that visitors can travel up to the top for magnificent city views.

Follow us on Facebook, Instagram and Twitter @batterseapowerst

See for yourself! This can now get closer to the chimneys than ever before. From 10 metres away, at the base of the south west chimney, they seem to stare up from the sky. There’s a lot of building work going on, but whenever you live in London, we hope you come and see them for yourself. Up close.
Rebuilding the chimneys is only one part of London’s biggest regeneration project. There’s an awful lot more going on.

VISITORS
200,000+
people have visited Circus West Village.

ARTS CENTRE
The Village Hall
is open, our 150-person performance space in Circus West Village. We’ve got nine more cultural spaces still to come.

CULTURAL ICON
£7m
We’re spending almost £7m bringing culture to the new town centre, working with Battersea Arts Centre and CASS Sculpture Foundation.

A BOOST FOR LONDON

CHOIR
50
Battersea Power Station Choir now has over 50 members.

OVER 150
apprentices have worked at Battersea Power Station so far.

ARTS CENTRE

TRAINING
BASE
We have our own training academy - Battersea Academy of Skills Excellence - which is training up and running, finding local people jobs at the Power Station.

CHILDREN
4,000
Every year we engage with over 4,000 schoolchildren from the local community to get them excited about this project.

PUBLIC ACCESS
River Walk opened
The redevelopment of the Power Station has allowed us to open a new river walk for the first time in almost 100 years.

PUBLIC SPACE
18 acres
of new open space will be created, including the 6-acre Power Station Park, open to all.

NEW TUBE STATIONS
£245m
We are contributing £68m to the Northern line extension. You will be less than 15 minutes from the West End and City, once the TFL Northern Line Extension is complete.

LOCAL BUSINESSES
23
We’re supporting independent businesses with 23 restaurants, cafes and retailers opening their doors at Circus West Village.

ENGAGEMENT
100,000
We have consulted over 100,000 local people in our plans for the new town centre at Battersea Power Station.

PUBLIC SPACE

NHS HOURS
20,000
Our exciting on-site medical facility for our construction workers has saved nearly 20,000 hours of NHS time so far, and several lives.

NHS
£13m
We’re building a brand new £13m NHS medical facility here. Construction will start later this year.

AAFFORDABLE HOMES
386
386 affordable homes are being built here. That’s 15% of our current detailed planning consent, and we want to build more.

COMMUNITY FORUM
70
Local groups represented at the Community Forum, which meets four times a year to consider the plans for Battersea Power Station.

NEW SERVICE
River Bus
A new Thames Clipper pier and river bus service opens to the public in Autumn 2017! Board from the new section of the River Walk.

NEW JOBS
20,000
New jobs will be created at Battersea Power Station by 2025. Interested? Visit baseatlondonacademy.co.uk

TO GOOD CAUSES
£6m
The Battersea Power Station Foundation has pledged grants of £6m. So far, it has made £4.5m local charitable donations, and invested over £2m into the local community.

A BOOST FOR LONDON

ECONOMY BOOST
£20bn
The redevelopment of Battersea Power Station will inject £20bn into the UK economy.